U2 Conquering poverty: When aspirations meet action

Unit overview

Poverty alleviation, a core UN Sustainable Development Goal, is not only a global endeavor crucial for improving living standards and promoting social equity, but also a key to unlocking economic potential and enhancing well-being worldwide. This unit offers a range of perspectives on poverty alleviation, highlighting both China's remarkable achievements and global efforts. In Understanding China, an American journalist's observations and the "Cliff Village" case illustrate the Chinese government's commitment to and remarkable achievements in poverty alleviation and rural revitalization. Exploring the world examines the developing countries' endeavors to alleviate poverty. These diverse strategies can help Ss appreciate how each society tailors its own distinctive path to poverty alleviation. Additionally, in Communicating with the world, Ss are asked to role-play an interview showcasing China's poverty alleviation strategies and achievements as well as its rural revitalization endeavors, which can help them deepen their understanding of China's poverty alleviation experience and develop a global perspective.

Key facts about China

The key facts presented in this unit are linked to the efforts and achievements of poverty alleviation and rural revitalization in China, ranging from population-centered poverty reduction to infrastructure-driven development and employment-based sustainability. These facts not only demonstrate the scale of China's achievements but also provide insights into the effective strategies employed.

Key fact 1: This fact represents the core of poverty alleviation, showing that China has fulfilled its promise of eliminating extreme poverty for a large rural population. It reflects the essence of people-centered development in poverty alleviation and rural revitalization, aiming at improving people's living standards and ensuring everyone's well-being.

Key fact 2: This fact emphasizes infrastructure development, a crucial factor in poverty alleviation and rural revitalization. Infrastructure promotes economic development, facilitates communication and trade, and provides convenience for people in rural areas, enabling them to better integrate into the modernized world.

Key fact 3: This fact focuses on the connection between employment and poverty alleviation. Stable employment is the key to consolidating poverty alleviation achievements and promoting rural revitalization. It ensures that those who have escaped poverty can have a permanent income and achieve long-term development, contributing to long-term prosperity in rural areas.

Teaching suggestions

The teaching aim of this unit's Lead-in section is to immerse Ss in China's poverty alleviation and rural revitalization efforts. The focus is on helping them comprehensively understand targeted poverty alleviation strategies and the transition to rural revitalization. Through this, students will not only recognize China's remarkable poverty-reduction achievements but also internalize the people-centered values behind these efforts. The suggested teaching steps are as follows:

Step 1: Begin the class by guiding students to browse the captioned pictures in this unit and encouraging them to share some key words related to China's poverty alleviation. Guide Ss to analyze the quote of the unit and encourage them to briefly discuss the terms "finish line" and "starting point," and share their understanding of them. Help them recognize that while poverty alleviation marks the finish line of one journey, it also serves as the starting point for China's commitment to rural revitalization.

Step 2: Have Ss review the key facts about China's poverty alleviation and rural revitalization efforts. Organize them into small groups to discuss which dimension is reflected in each fact.

Step 3: Encourage Ss to brainstorm additional measures and achievements related to poverty alleviation and rural revitalization beyond the given facts. Guide them to consider initiatives such as relocation projects, microfinancing, and East-West paring-up programs.

Step 4: Guide Ss through Scenario and help them identify the gap between their existing knowledge of China's poverty alleviation and rural revitalization efforts and the knowledge they need to successfully complete the task outlined in Scenario.

Step 5: Outline the unit's learning objectives to help Ss stay focused and actively engage with the content in a meaningful and effective way.

Understanding China

The video in this section offers an overview of China's poverty alleviation endeavors, highlighting elements like targeted policies, innovation-led development, and the seamless transition from poverty alleviation to rural revitalization. The text, using the real-world example of "Cliff Village," demonstrates the practical application of these concepts. It shows how locally customized poverty alleviation plans, such as infrastructure construction, relocation, and industrial development, are carried out. The two materials are intricately linked, with the "Cliff Village" case in the second material vividly exemplifying the principles set forth in the first.

In the Understanding China section, the main teaching objective is to enable Ss to comprehend China's poverty alleviation and rural revitalization strategies and accomplishments. The challenge lies in equipping Ss with effective intercultural communication skills to convey these efforts and achievements to global audiences.

These materials vividly illustrate the core values and principles underlying China's poverty alleviation and rural revitalization. Targeted policies and locally-tailored plans mirror the "people-centered development" concept. The ongoing progression from poverty alleviation to rural revitalization is in line with the principle of sustainable development. Such efforts manifest China's dedication to enhancing people's livelihoods and constructing a more prosperous future.

In my hometown, which used to be a poverty-stricken area, the most obvious change is in infrastructure. In the past, the roads were narrow and bumpy. It was extremely difficult for villagers to transport agricultural products to the market. However, the initiatives for poverty alleviation included the construction of wide and smooth tarmac roads, connecting every village. Now, trucks can easily drive in and out, and the transportation of agricultural products has become much easier.

Moreover, in terms of industry, many poverty-stricken areas have developed locally-based industries under the guidance of poverty alleviation policies. For example, some places have started to grow high-value cash crops like tea and fruits. Special technical teams were sent to teach farmers how to plant and manage these crops.

As a result, farmers' incomes have increased significantly, enabling them to get out of poverty successfully.

I came to China in 2006, and have since traveled in every provincial-level region on the Chinese mainland to experience and contribute to China's poverty alleviation miracle and overall development. I've not only chronicled these journeys in hundreds of China Daily stories and videos, but have encapsulated these unexpected adventures in my book. I've often been surprised by the unconventional solutions I've encountered throughout the country.

President Xi Jinping proposed the targeted poverty alleviation strategy. From the deserts of Inner Mongolia to the tundra of Xizang, from the forests of Guizhou to the prairies of Hebei, Chinese people have developed unexpected innovations to overcome the often extreme and complicated causes of poverty throughout this vast nation.

In the Daliang Mountains of Sichuan Province, I visited Abuluoha, the last village on the Chinese mainland to connect to the outside world by road. Building the road required using an Mi-26 helicopter to fly in excavators and loaders. After its completion, travel times to and from the village were greatly reduced. For me, it was incredible to see first-hand how the village finally ended its isolation. In Desheng Village, on the parched outskirts of Zhangjiakou, Hebei Province, I've seen how the disadvantages brought about by drought have been turned into advantages through the use of solar power. Its solar farm has turned sunshine into money and the villagers are gaining new affluence. In Ganzhou, Jiangxi Province, I joined a livestream in a farmer's kiwifruit orchard. Many people like him are using livestreams and e-commerce to sell products around the country, rapidly accelerating poverty alleviation in such communities. Not only have incomes substantially increased, but other areas of quality of life have also improved, such as healthcare, education, housing, and drinking water.

Nearly 100 million impoverished rural residents were lifted out of poverty in nearly a decade up to the end of 2020. And rural residents' per capita disposable income increased to $1,951 (12,588 yuan) in previously impoverished areas in 2020. Shaking off poverty is not the finish line, but the starting point for new life and new endeavors. From achieving a complete victory in the fight against poverty to advancing rural revitalization, across the board, China is creating a better future in the new era.

Notes

1 In 2013, President Xi Jinping proposed "targeted poverty alleviation" for the first time during a visit to Shibadong Village in Hunan Province. In its poverty elimination effort, China launched a series of guidelines and measures to increase efficiency, summarized as accomplishing "Targeted Efforts in Six Areas," taking "Five Measures for Poverty Eradication," and addressing "Five Questions in Poverty Alleviation."

- The "Targeted Efforts in Six Areas" are efforts to accurately identify the poor people, arrange targeted programs, utilize capital efficiently, take household-based measures, dispatch first Party secretaries according to the conditions in the village, and achieve the set goals.
- The "Five Measures for Poverty Eradication" include: boosting the economy to provide more job opportunities, relocating poor people from inhospitable areas, compensating the economic losses associated with reducing ecological damage, improving education in impoverished areas, and providing subsistence allowances for those unable to shake off poverty through their own efforts alone.
- The "Five Questions in Poverty Alleviation" ask: who should help, who should be helped, how to help, how to assess whether someone has emerged from poverty, and how to ensure those people stay free from poverty.

2 Abuluoha (阿布洛哈村) is a village encompassed by mountains and cliffs, located in a river valley about 60 kilometers from Butuo County in southwest China's Sichuan Province. With a population of merely 253 people, most of whom are of the Yi ethnic group, Abuluoha had long suffered from poverty and poor transport infrastructure due to the rugged mountainous terrain.

Driven by nationwide anti-poverty efforts, great changes have taken place in Abuluoha within years. Kids started to receive primary education when the village's very first school was established in 2005. The villagers gained access to safe drinking water and electricity supply in 2007 and 2010, respectively. By 2019, the village had been provided with full 4G network coverage.

On June 29, 2020, villagers moved out of thatch houses into concrete ones at a poverty-relief relocation site. The next day, the launch of a 3.8-kilometer road along cliffs and ravines marked a new dawn in the village's history.

3 About 10 kilometers northeast of downtown Zhangbei County in northern Hebei Province lies Desheng Village (德胜村). In Chinese, "Desheng" rhymes with the word "success." But for many years, the villagers lived in poverty.

Due to its barren land and harsh climate, the area had unstable and usually poor agricultural production. In 2013, more than half of the 413 households in the village lived in poverty. In view of its conditions and resources, Desheng Village decided to develop mini potato farming, photovoltaic power generation, and rural tourism. The village went through transformative changes.

1 I came to China in 2006, and have since traveled in every provincial-level region on the Chinese mainland to experience and contribute to China's poverty alleviation miracle and overall development. (Para. 1)

alleviation: n. [U] the act of making sth. bad, such as pain or problems less severe 缓解

Access to clean water has played a crucial role in the alleviation of health issues in many remote areas.

Note: Expressions with Chinese characteristics related to poverty alleviation include "targeted poverty alleviation (精准扶贫)," "poverty alleviation through business development (产业扶贫)," "poverty alleviation by developing the eco-economy (生态扶贫)," "battle against extreme poverty (脱贫攻坚战)," etc.

2 From the deserts of Inner Mongolia to the tundra of Xizang, from the forests of Guizhou to the prairies of Hebei, Chinese people have developed unexpected innovations to overcome the often extreme and complicated causes of poverty throughout this vast nation. (Para.2)

Note: The sentence begins with a parallel structure "From ... to ..., from ... to ..." which emphasizes the wide geographical range within China. This highlights how different regions have implemented tailored poverty alleviation measures based on their unique circumstances.

3 Building the road required using an Mi-26 helicopter to fly in excavators and loaders. (Para. 3) fly in: transport (goods, people, etc.) to a place by air 运送（货物、人员等）至某地

The emergency team was flown in to the disaster-stricken area along with essential supplies to aid the victims.

4 Not only have incomes substantially increased, but other areas of quality of life have also improved, such as healthcare, education, housing, and drinking water. (Para. 3)

Note: This sentence employs the "not only ... but also ..." structure. When "not only" is placed at the beginning of the sentence and is followed by a verb phrase, the sentence must use partial inversion, as seen in "Not only have incomes substantially increased." This is a common emphatic structure in English.

5 From achieving a complete victory in the fight against poverty to advancing rural revitalization, across the board, China is creating a better future in the new era. (Para. 4)

across the board: universally 全面地；包括一切地；涉及全体地
The living conditions of rural residents have been improved across the board.

Note: When connected with hyphens, "across-the-board" is used as an adjective, for example, The new across-the-board policy aims to promote economic development in all regions.

Intercultural communication skill

Teaching suggestions

The teaching objective of this intercultural communication skill section is to enhance Ss' ability to effectively utilize personal experiences to connect with and engage diverse audiences. The key focus lies in guiding Ss to apply these learned techniques in their own presentations, while also being aware of potential pitfalls like self-centeredness and irrelevance. T might find these teaching steps helpful:

- Guide Ss to analyze the narrator's personal experiences in the text. Point out how the narrator describes his travels across different regions in China, e.g., "I came to China in 2006, and have since traveled in every provincial-level region on the Chinese mainland." Ask Ss why this kind of broad-scope personal experience sharing is impactful.

- Discuss the specific expressions the narrator uses to convey his feelings, such as "I've often been surprised by ..." and "it was incredible to see ..." Have Ss consider how these expressions draw the reader in and make the story more engaging.
- Emphasize the importance of reflection as shown in the text. The narrator reflects on the impact of poverty alleviation measures, like in the cases of Abuluoha, Desheng Village, and Ganzhou. Ask Ss to identify these reflection points and explain how they add depth to the story.
- Have Ss present their stories in class. After each presentation, ask the rest of the class to provide feedback on how well the personal experience made the story appealing and how to improve the story.
- Warn Ss about potential pitfalls when sharing personal experiences in an intercultural context. For example, they should avoid being overly self-centered in their stories and make sure their experiences are relevant to the topic and the audience.

In my hometown, the impact of China's poverty alleviation efforts can be seen everywhere. A few years ago, when I visited my grandparents during my summer vacation, I noticed that the roads were in a lamentable state – narrow, dirt tracks filled with potholes. Accompanying my grandfather to sell his home-grown vegetables at the local market was a back-breaking task. We had to load the produce onto an old, rickety cart and push it for miles. The rough terrain damaged many of the vegetables, and I felt a deep sense of frustration and worry, both for the wasted effort and the meager income we might earn. Fast-forward to last year's visit, and I was greeted with a completely different sight. Wide tarmac roads now wind through the village, allowing trucks to come and go with ease. I witnessed villagers loading fresh fruits and vegetables onto trucks bound for cities. The local government had helped build greenhouses and provided training in modern farming techniques. This transformation filled me with a profound sense of excitement and hope. I could see the villagers' happiness and enthusiasm, and my grandfather, once so burdened by financial stress, now beamed with pride as he told me their income had tripled in just a couple of years.

Text: From vine ladder to steel ladder

Background information

China has been committed to poverty alleviation for decades. After the founding of the People's Republic of China, a land reform was rolled out across the country to abolish the feudal land system that had been in place for over 2,000 years. This action removed the major institutional obstacle to eliminating poverty. Subsequently, the reform and opening-up policy further accelerated socioeconomic development, giving a vigorous boost to poverty alleviation and resulting in a sharp decline in the number of impoverished people. As China marched into the new era, the 18th CPC National Congress in 2012 set the goal of building a moderately prosperous society in all respects. When launching the new-era poverty alleviation campaign, President Xi declared, "Not a single poverty-stricken area or individual would be left behind." In 2013, during his inspection tour to Shibadong Village, President Xi proposed for the first time the concept of "giving differentiated guidance for targeted poverty alleviation in line with local conditions by seeking truth from facts". In 2015, at the National Conference on Development-driven Poverty Alleviation, he sounded the bugle call to battle, "We should be determined, dedicate ourselves, and work hard towards the goal." Atulie'er, or "Cliff Village" accelerated its poverty-alleviation initiatives, becoming a microcosm of China's relentless efforts in the battle against extreme poverty. By 2020, China had completed the arduous task of eliminating extreme poverty, fulfilling the poverty-reduction target of the UN 2030 Agenda for Sustainable Development 10 years ahead of schedule.

Registered as living in poverty（建档立卡贫困户）: Registered impoverished households are identified through a national registration process to accurately assess poverty, analyze causes, and address needs. These households benefit from various support policies, including living subsidies, poverty alleviation loans, skills training, and special projects such as education, medical aid, and microloans. These measures aim to enhance self-development, promote self-reliance, and help families ultimately escape poverty and achieve prosperity.

Language points

1 With a sense of bittersweet farewell, he tidied the ashes from the firepit, swept the courtyard floor, and closed the gate. (Para. 1)

Note: The term "bittersweet" employs the rhetorical device of oxymoron, which combines two contradictory terms to create a unique and thought-provoking effect. "Bitter" implies unpleasantness, and "sweet" connotes pleasantness. Here, "bittersweet" describes the farewell. The "bitter" aspect is his heavy heart when leaving a place that holds memories, perhaps a place where he had lived for a long time. The "sweet" part is the anticipation of a new beginning or the relief of moving on from something.

Besides, the sentence uses a series of parallel verb phrases "tidied," "swept," and "closed" to describe a sequence of actions. This structure further emphasizes his mixed emotions, as each action seems to symbolize a step in the process of letting go.

2 West of the fertile plains of Sichuan lie high mountains, where some of the most impoverished villages are nestled in Liangshan Yi Autonomous Prefecture. (Para. 2)

校园资料仓

Meaning: To the west of Sichuan's fertile plains, there are towering mountains, and they are home to some of the most impoverished villages in Liangshan Yi Autonomous Prefecture.

Note: The sentence contains a subject-verb inversion structure. This type of inversion is common when a prepositional phrase is placed at the beginning of a sentence, especially in literary or descriptive writing. It draws attention to the location ("West of the fertile plains of Sichuan") and creates a more formal or poetic tone.

3 Poverty has long cast a shadow over this mountainous region, with the vine ladder standing in the way of a better life for the villagers. (Para. 3) cast a shadow over sth.: make a situation seem less hopeful and more likely to end badly 给…蒙上阴影

The economic crisis cast a shadow over the future of the company.

stand in the way of sth.: be an obstacle or hindrance that prevents sb. or sth. from progressing, achieving a goal, or happening as it should 阻碍；妨碍
Fear of failure should never stand in the way of pursuing your dreams and achieving your goals.

4 The village also established a preschool, enabling children to receive free preschool education without having to make the trek down the mountain. (Para. 5)

trek:

n. a long and difficult journey, made esp. on foot as an adventure （尤指徒步的）艰苦长途旅行

We set off on another four-hour trek through the swamps.

v. make a long and difficult trip, esp. on foot （尤指徒步的）艰苦长途跋涉

They had to trek a few kilometers to the nearest store.

Note: In this context, "make the trek" refers to the effort required for children in the village to travel down the mountain to access preschool education.

5 As more tourists arrived, many villagers started running small stores and home stays. (Para. 6)

Note: In the sentence, "run" means to organize or to be in charge of an activity, business, organization, or country. For example: "She moved to the countryside to run a hotel that offered guests a peaceful retreat."

校园资料仓

6 It was recognized that lifting all the residents in "Cliff Village" out of poverty would require an unbearably high cost to further improve infrastructure, including transportation, communication, and electricity. After careful consideration, the local government decided that it might be best to relocate these impoverished households to apartments specifically built for them in the county and help them settle and rebuild their lives there. (Para. 7)

Note: The sentence explains the rationale behind relocating the villagers, citing the prohibitively high cost of further improving their living conditions as the primary reason. It shows the local government's rational decision-making process, emphasizing that the decision was not made arbitrarily but was the result of careful deliberation.

7 When these impoverished households move, their cliff houses can be repurposed for tourism, and a large amount of land also becomes available, allowing those who remain to have more per capita land for use. (Para. 8)

Meaning: Once these poor families relocate, their former houses can be transformed for tourism. Additionally, a significant expanse of land is set free. As a result, the people who stay in the village will have a larger share of the land per capita at their disposal.

repurpose: vt. find a new use for sth.; use sth. for a different purpose than it was originally intended 重新利用；改变用途
They repurposed the old barn into a cozy restaurant.

per capita: a. (fml.) used to describe the average amount of sth. in a particular place, calculated according to the number of people who live there 人均的；平均每人的
The per capita income in this city has been increasing steadily.

8 The path of "Cliff Village" continues to broaden, mirroring the sweeping changes that resonate across China's rural landscape. (Para. 11)

Note: In the sentence, the "path" is not just a physical road but a symbol representing the development or progress of "Cliff Village." It symbolizes the journey of the village toward betterment, such as economic growth, social development, and improvement in people's well-being. By saying the path is "broadening," it implies that the village is experiencing more opportunities and a wider range of possibilities for development. Also, the "path … continues to broaden," gives the "path" a sense of agency as if it is an entity that is actively evolving. This can be seen as a subtle form of personification, making the description more vivid.

9 These villages, each with their own tale to tell, contribute to a harmonious chorus, hailing China's remarkable transformation and unwavering dedication not only to eradicating poverty, but also to fostering sustainable growth, revitalizing rural areas, and ensuring that the sweetest fruits of progress are enjoyed by all its people. (Para. 11)

Note: "Each with their own tale to tell" gives the villages a human-like quality. Villages are inanimate objects, but saying they have "tales to tell" implies that they have experiences, stories, and a kind of voice. This personification makes the reader think of the villages not as a location but as a community of people, each with their individual stories to tell.

The phrase "contribute to a harmonious chorus" is a metaphor. Here, each village's poverty alleviation story is compared to an individual voice that comes together to form a "chorus." Just as a chorus is a group of voices that blend together to create a beautiful and unified sound, the villages come together to form a collective tribute to China's achievements.

1 2020 年 5 月 13 日清晨，51 岁的某色达体比平时起得要早。阳光倾洒在海拔 1500 多米的半山腰小院里。即将跟老房子告别，他喜忧参半。清理了火塘的灰烬，扫净了院子的地面，关上了家门。他驻足片刻，最后看了一眼熟悉的老房子，然后转身迈步前行。这一天，他将和妻子下山，开启充满希望和无限可能的新生活。

2 在富饶的四川平原以西，崇山峻岭之间坐落着凉山彝族自治州的几个极其贫困的村庄，阿土列尔村便是其中之一，这里是某色达体的家。这个村子更广为人知的名字是“悬崖村”，得名于那条由藤条和木棍搭建而成的“天梯”。过去，村民们必须攀爬这座天梯，花费两到三个小时才能上下山。攀爬藤梯极其危险，但村民们别无选择。

3 贫困长期笼罩着这片山区，攀爬藤梯的出行方式阻碍了村民通往更好生活。自 2016 年以来，中国大地上实施了前所未有的扶贫行动，“悬崖村”的生活因此发生了翻天覆地的变化。

4 2016 年，当地政府筹集了 100 万元，用 6000 多根钢管建造了一条 1.5 米宽的钢梯。钢梯让上下山变得更容易、更安全。养羊合作社养的 400 多头山羊和 80 多头绵羊，不用发愁销路了。同年种下的脐橙树到 2019 年开始为村民带来显著的收入。在大棚里，村民们开始种植高利润的三七药材，还用上了滴灌。他们的收入得到了大幅提升。

5 随着钢梯的建设，基站也顺利架设，为村子带来了 4G 网络。村民们再也不用“爬到山顶找信号”了。无人机可以在五分钟内将急需药品送到诊所，解决了以往基础物资匮乏的问题，成为村民的生命线。此外，村里还建了一所幼儿园，孩子们无须下山即可接受免费的学前教育。

6 通过互联网，一些村民甚至成了“网红”，他们的短视频获得了数百万次观看。“悬崖村”的名气越来越大，2019 年吸引了近 10 万名游客。随着游客的增多，不少村民开起了小商店和民宿，这些生意显著增加了村民收入，成为他们的主要经济来源。

7 尽管部分村民的生活得到了改善，到 2019 年，村里仍有 84 户建档立卡贫困户。人们认识到，要让“悬崖村”的所有居民脱贫，需要进一步改善基础设施，包括交通、通信和电力，但所需成本高昂，难以承受。经过慎重考虑，当地政府决定在县城为这些贫困家庭修建专门的安置房，帮助他们在那里安居乐业。

8 贫困户搬迁后，他们悬崖上的住宅可以被改造用于发展旅游业。搬迁后还能腾出土地，继续留在村里的村民人均可用土地面积得到增加。在发展旅游业

的同时，他们还可以进行更大规模的种植和养殖，进一步拓展收入来源。

9 正是在这样的背景下，某色达体和其他贫困村民收拾行李，从山上搬迁下来。他们的行李十分简单，只有床上用品和衣物，因为政府已经确保新家的各项设施一应俱全。在安置区周边，十多个现代农业产业园正在紧锣密鼓地开发中，为搬迁至此的村民提供本地就业机会。当地政府还提供技能培训、劳务输出服务和补贴，帮助他们快速适应在城镇的新生活。

10 从藤梯到钢梯，再到楼梯，当地政府将继续整合资源，将住房建设、城镇化推进、乡村旅游开发以及教育均衡发展紧密结合，力求确保无论是选择留下的村民还是搬迁的居民，都能走向富裕之路。

11 “悬崖村”的道路越走越宽，反映出中国广大乡村的巨变。这些村庄各自独特的故事交织在一起，奏响了一曲和谐的乐章，彰显了中国在消除贫困、推动可持续发展以及振兴乡村方面所展现出的非凡转型与坚定决心，确保发展成果惠及全体人民。

1 The word “bittersweet” conveys that Mose Dati had mixed feelings. “Sweet” refers to the anticipation of a new beginning. “Bitter” indicates his heavy heart as he was leaving behind his old home and possibly his many memories associated with it.

校园资料仓

He was sad to say goodbye to the familiar, yet also somewhat looking forward to a change.

2 After the implementation of the anti-poverty initiative in 2016, "Cliff Village" underwent significant changes, including the construction of a steel ladder, improved access to economic activities such as goat farming, navel orange cultivation, and sanqi herb farming. A 4G network was introduced, enabling better connectivity. Drones delivered essential medicines to the clinic and a preschool was established for free education. Tourism flourished, attracting nearly 100,000 visitors in 2019, with villagers running small stores and home stays to boost income. Additionally, some villagers became Internet celebrities, further enhancing the village's visibility and economic opportunities. These transformations greatly improved the villagers' quality of life and opened new avenues for development.

- The villagers, including Mose Dati, moved away from the mountain due to the local government's decision to relocate impoverished households to apartments specifically built for them in the county. This decision was made because, if they had remained at their original location, further enhancing their living standards would have required an unbearably high cost, as it would have been necessary to improve the infrastructure.
- Moving away transformed their lives as they were provided with modern housing and everything needed for their new homes. Modern agricultural industrial parks offered local job opportunities. The government also provided skills training, labor export services, and subsidies to help the relocated villagers adapt to urban life quickly. This relocation allowed the villagers to rebuild their lives with fresh hope and greater possibilities.

4 In the text, "vine ladder" symbolizes the old, primitive, and dangerous living conditions in "Cliff Village." It represents the difficult and arduous way of life the villagers had to endure. "Steel ladder" symbolizes the first step of improvement in the infrastructure, a sign that the situation was starting to get better. It shows that the government was taking action to make the village more accessible. "Stairways" symbolize further progress and development. They represent a more stable and comfortable living environment, indicating that villagers are moving toward a more prosperous future.

Intercultural communication skill

Teaching suggestions

The teaching objective of this intercultural communication skill section is to enhance Ss' ability to effectively give reasons when describing China's poverty alleviation achievements in an intercultural context. The key focus lies in guiding Ss to understand the importance of justifying actions rather than merely stating facts. Additionally, Ss are taught to use simple and clear language, avoiding jargon, when presenting reasons to foreign audiences. T may find the teaching steps helpful:

- Begin the class by briefly revisiting the concept of giving reasons in intercultural communication. Emphasize that in the context of discussing China's lesser-known and often misunderstood policies and measures, it's not just about stating facts but also about justifying why certain actions were taken.
- Use simple examples from everyday life to further illustrate the concept. For instance, if you are trying to convince a friend from another culture to try a Chinese delicacy they may not be accustomed to, you don't just say "It's good," but you also explain why. For example, "It has a unique blend of spices that balance sweet and savory, which gives it a distinct flavor."
- Facilitate a group discussion on the topic: "How would you introduce the poverty alleviation measure of relocation implemented in China?" Guide Ss to closely read paragraphs seven to nine and encourage them to share their insights.
- Divide the class into small groups, and ask them to brainstorm other poverty alleviation measures implemented in China might be unfamiliar to international audiences. Group members take turns role-playing as villagers or local officials, explaining the reasons behind various poverty alleviation measures.
- Teach Ss that when giving reasons to foreign audiences, they need to use simple and clear language. Remind them to avoid using jargon and to focus on explaining the concept in an accessible way.

Ecological compensation（生态补偿）is an innovative poverty-alleviation strategy that combines environmental conservation with income generation for residents in ecologically fragile areas. This approach encourages sustainable development by rewarding individuals and communities for protecting and restoring natural ecosystems, rather than exploiting them for short-term economic gain. For example, impoverished residents in ecologically fragile areas are hired as forest rangers to protect forests, prevent illegal logging, and monitor wildlife. This creates jobs while ensuring environmental protection. In Yunnan Province, the government employed local villagers, many of whom were from ethnic minority groups, as forest rangers. They were tasked with patrolling protected areas, planting trees, and reporting environmental violations. This program provided stable incomes for thousands of families while preserving biodiversity in the region.

China is a key advocate of and contributor to global poverty alleviation efforts. China had completely eradicated absolute poverty by 2020, and reached the poverty reduction goal of the United Nations 2030 Agenda for Sustainable Development a full decade ahead of schedule. On this basis, China has established a five-year transition period to consolidate the achievements in poverty alleviation and fully advance rural revitalization. Through a series of policies and practices, China has explored a unique development path, contributing its wisdom and strength to global poverty reduction and rural development. This demonstrates China's active commitment to building a global community of shared future that is free from poverty and pursues common prosperity.

The "targeted poverty alleviation strategy" can be defined as a highly focused and customized approach to poverty reduction. It doesn't adopt a one-size-fits-all method but tailors solutions according to the specific circumstances of different impoverished regions and individuals.

Six key aspects ensure the effectiveness of poverty alleviation efforts. These include:

- Precise identification of poverty-stricken individuals: Ensuring accurate identification of those in need of assistance by carefully assessing their circumstances.
- Precise arrangement of projects: Designing and implementing projects tailored to the specific needs of impoverished regions and individuals.
- Precise use of funds: Allocating financial resources efficiently and transparently to maximize their impact.
- Precise measures for each household: Developing targeted solutions that address the unique challenges faced by each household.
- Precise assignment of personnel to villages: Deploying capable personnel to villages to oversee and guide poverty alleviation efforts.
- Precise evaluation of poverty alleviation results: Monitoring and evaluating the outcomes of poverty alleviation initiatives to ensure their effectiveness and sustainability.

"Cliff Village" is an example of targeted poverty alleviation. It demonstrates some of the "Six Precisions" of targeted poverty alleviation by identifying 84 impoverished households in "Cliff Village" (precise identification) and implementing tailored projects, such as building a steel ladder and introducing navel orange farming (precise arrangement of projects). Funds were efficiently used to improve the infrastructure and develop agricultural parks near resettlement areas (precise use of funds).

One measure for rural revitalization is the development of rural cultural tourism. For example, in some villages in southern China, policies and measures are made to encourage the protection of the traditional architecture and cultural heritage. Tourism routes are built to attract tourists to experience local folk customs, traditional handicrafts, and unique cuisines. This contributes to long-term prosperity in rural areas in several ways. Firstly, it attracts external consumption, increasing the income of villagers who can run homestays, sell handicrafts, and provide catering services.

Secondly, it promotes the preservation of local culture, which can enhance the villagers' sense of identity and pride. Thirdly, it can attract young people to return to their hometowns, bringing new ideas and technologies, thus strengthening the local workforce.

Another measure is the promotion of agricultural modernization. In some large-scale agricultural regions, the introduction of advanced agricultural machinery and intelligent irrigation systems has significantly improved agricultural productivity. For example, in the plains of Northeast China, large-scale farms use drones for crop spraying and automated harvesters. This reduces labor costs, increases the yield and quality of agricultural products, and makes rural agriculture more competitive. It also promotes the development of related industries such as agricultural machinery maintenance and agricultural technology consulting, creating more job opportunities in rural areas and contributing to long-term economic growth.

The establishment of rural cooperatives is also an important measure. In many rural areas, farmers form cooperatives to jointly purchase production materials, sell agricultural products, and share resources. For instance, in a village that specializes in fruit growing, the cooperative negotiates better prices with buyers, reduces the cost of production materials through bulk purchases, and provides technical training to members. This helps to increase farmers' income, improve their bargaining power in the market, and promote the sustainable development of rural industries.

Exploring the world

Building upon the in-depth analysis of China's poverty alleviation endeavors and remarkable achievements, the instructional focus now pivots toward exploring diverse global approaches to poverty alleviation. The text in this section spotlights how distinct developing nations, such as Mozambique, Bangladesh, and Brazil, grapple with poverty. Each country confronts unique challenges and has crafted bespoke solutions.

The teaching focus is to help Ss identify and understand poverty alleviation initiatives and achievements in these countries. The difficulty lies in guiding Ss to critically analyze the underlying rationales behind each country's approach to combating poverty.

T should stress that eradicating poverty is a shared goal among nations worldwide and an urgent need that deeply resonates with the "Global South." Active efforts should be made to promote South-South cooperation and global collaboration, supporting and assisting developing countries, especially the least developed nations, in their fight against poverty. Together, countries should join hands to build a global community of shared future that is free from poverty and pursues common development.

Text: Global strides in poverty alleviation

Notes

1 Mozambique has built several development corridors to promote regional integration, economic growth, and sustainable development in the country and its neighbors. These corridors are typically centered around key transportation routes, such as highways, railways, and ports, and are designed to connect resource-rich areas with domestic and international markets. Notable corridors in Mozambique include the Maputo development corridor, the Beira development corridor, and the Nacala development corridor.

2 Initiated in 1995, Brazil's Family Allowance Program expanded rapidly, covering 98% of poor families in 5,562 municipalities by 2001, benefiting 8.2 million children from 4.8 million families. Targeting families with a monthly per capita income below 60 Brazilian reais or below 120 reais for households with pregnant women, breastfeeding mothers, or children under 15, the program reached 11 million families by 2006. It significantly advanced social equity, reduced poverty, and broke the intergenerational cycle of poverty by linking cash transfers to conditions like school attendance, vaccinations, and prenatal care.

Language points

1 The diverse manifestations and causes of impoverished conditions require solutions that are tailored to each country's specific context. (Para. 1)

Meaning: Poverty manifests differently across countries, requiring solutions adapted to each nation's unique circumstances.

tailor sth. to: make or change sth. esp. for a particular person or purpose 针对…而做；针对…而修改

The newly designed marketing plan is tailored to the company's long-term development goals.

2 Agricultural development is slow, leading to low and inconsistent crop yields which feed into food insecurity. (Para. 2)

Meaning: The slow pace of agricultural development results in low and unstable crop production, leading to food insecurity.

feed into sth.: have an effect on sth. or help to make it happen 影响

The new policies feed into the company's overall success by improving employee satisfaction and fostering a more innovative work environment.

3 All of these measures have diversified the economy and built resilience to economic shocks. (Para.3)

Meaning: These efforts have expanded economic diversity and strengthened the country's ability to withstand economic shocks.

resilience: [U] n. the ability of a person or thing to feel better quickly after an unpleasant situation, such as shock, injury, or illness (In an economic context, it refers to the ability to recover from economic downturns.) 恢复力；弹性

The economy's resilience was tested during the crisis.

4 Together, these efforts have made a significant dent in poverty across central Mozambique. (Para. 3)

make a dent in sth.: reduce the amount of sth. 减少；削弱

Her diligent efforts to save money have finally made a dent in her student loan debt, bringing her closer to financial freedom.

5 Consequently, one of the primary goals for poverty reduction there is to address the landless poor, ensuring that they have access to the resources and opportunities needed to improve their livelihood and living conditions. (Para. 4)

Meaning: As a result, a key objective in reducing poverty in South Asia is to address the needs of the poor who lack access to land by providing them with the necessary resources and opportunities to improve their quality of life and economic well-being.

have access to: be able to use or obtain sth. 拥有对…的使用权
Having access to up-to-date financial information is important to our success.

6 Borrowers repay these loans through small, regular payments, often within a supportive group structure, which fosters accountability and community solidarity. (Para.5)

Meaning: People who have borrowed money (borrowers) pay back the loans they have received by making small payments at regular intervals. These payments are often made within a group setting that provides support. This group structure helps to create a sense of responsibility (accountability) among the borrowers and also strengthens the unity and togetherness (solidarity) within the community.

Note: In Bangladesh's microfinance model, borrowers are usually organized into groups, with group members providing mutual guarantees and sharing joint responsibility for the loan. This mechanism reduces the bank's risk, as if one member is unable to repay the loan, the other members are obligated to assist in repayment.

7 These loans do not require borrowers to pledge property as collateral, which makes them accessible to the poorest segments of the population who are normally shut out from traditional banking. (Para. 5)

Meaning： These loans are designed to be accessible to the poorest individuals by removing the requirement for property as collateral.

vt. leave sth. with sb. as a guarantee that you will repay money that you have borrowed 抵押；典当
He pledged his car as collateral to secure the loan from the bank.
n. [C] (fml.) (~ of) a serious promise or agreement, esp. one made publicly or officially （尤指公开或正式作出的）誓言，誓约，保证
The organization made a pledge of $1 million to support global poverty reduction efforts.

校园资料合

shut out: deliberately not let sb. join you in an activity or share your thoughts and feelings 把某人排斥在外

He felt shut out from the decision-making process, as his opinions were never considered by the team.

8 The country has pushed hard for vocational education to boost employment. (Para.7) push for： try very hard to achieve sth. or persuade sb. to do it 努力争取；力劝

The company pushed for innovation, investing heavily in research and development to stay ahead of competitors.

9 As these efforts continue to grow, the goal of poverty eradication becomes within reach. (Para.9) within reach: be close enough to be touched or obtained; achievable 在可及范围内；可实现的

After a challenging climb, the top of the mountain is finally within reach.

全球减贫进展

1 进入 21 世纪，尽管经济取得了显著发展，贫困依然是一个极具挑战的全球性问题。贫困状况的多样化表现及其深层原因决定了每个国家需要根据自身具体情况制定相应的解决方案。全球各国虽各自面临挑战，仍在采取独特的策略，帮助本国公民摆脱贫困。

2 在撒哈拉以南非洲，贫困与生产力落后息息相关，对社会的许多方面造成了系统性影响。农业发展缓慢导致作物产量低且不稳定，加剧了粮食安全问题。同时，工业基础薄弱，制造业等经济领域难以支撑社会经济的持续增长。此外，基础设施和公共服务也远远落后于世界其他地区。

3 多年来，这一地区的许多国家为应对系统性贫困做出了巨大努力。例如，莫桑比克依据其国内的主要交通网络，设立了多个区域发展走廊，以改善基础设施、提高农业生产力并推动经济多样化。其中，贝拉走廊在提升贝拉港现代化水平以及优化港口与内陆地区的铁路和公路连接中发挥了重要作用。这些改进措施减少了物流成本，简化了货物运输流程，有力地支持了莫桑比克中部区域及其邻国将货物，尤其是农产品和矿产，高效运往国际市场。此外，在走廊沿线投资建设的灌溉系统减少了对季节性降雨的依赖，提高了农业生产力，进一步稳定了农民，尤其是小农户的农业生产。同时，基础设施与交通的改善也加速了工业发展步伐，吸引了制造业和其他领域的投资。这些措

施协同作用，促进了经济多元化，增强了对经济波动的抵御能力，大幅缓解了莫桑比克中部地区的贫困状况。

4 南亚地区是世界上人口最为稠密的区域之一，其贫困问题主要根植于土地资源的分配不均。因此，该地区减贫的首要目标之一是解决无地农民的困境，确保他们能获得改善生计和生活条件所需的资源与机会。

5 该地区的突出举措之一是孟加拉国的小微金融模式。这种模式直接向诸如手工艺品制作、经贸活动、家禽牲畜养殖等非农业活动提供小额信贷，是一种有效的脱贫手段。这些小额信贷无须借款人提供抵押，从而使得最贫困的群体也能获得资金支持。该模式不仅助力贫困人口开展或扩大小型业务，增加收入来源，改善生活质量，而且还帮助他们提高基础的财务管理和生活技能。借款人通常采用小额、定期的还款方式，并在互助小组中建立起支持网络，这既增强了他们的责任感，也增进了社区凝聚力。这一策略成效显著，帮助数百万人摆脱了贫困的束缚，助力孟加拉国绝对贫困率从 1978 年的 82%大幅降低到 2018 年的 11.3%。凭借这一模式，众多贫困人口成功实现了经济自立，摆脱了贫困的恶性循环。

6 与撒哈拉以南非洲的系统性贫困及南亚普遍存在的农村贫困现象不同，随着人口不断流向城市，拉丁美洲面临日益严峻的城市贫困挑战。来自农村地区的移民往往陷入长期失业或非正式就业的困境，缺乏社会保障和稳定经济来源，使他们极易陷入贫困陷阱。

7 为应对这些挑战，巴西政府采取了综合性的策略，其核心在于强调包容性发展。该国积极促进职业教育发展，提升整体就业水平。同时，政府通过劳动局设立了就业支持服务部门，有效利用网络和媒体资源构建人才数据库，实时追踪劳动力市场的供需动态，搭建起顺畅的供需对接平台。

8 巴西的家庭补助金计划同样为这些移民家庭提供了帮助。政府依据贫困家庭的人均月收入以及家中未成年子女的数量来确定援助金额。领取补助金的家庭需确保学龄儿童和青少年按时入学、为 0 至 6 岁的儿童完成疫苗接种，并为女性成员提供产前及产后保健服务。这一举措将有效地缓解代际贫困问题。

9 总体而言，这三个地区展示了如何针对特定挑战制定量身定制的减贫计划。尽管挑战重重，但克服困难的决心显而易见。随着这些减贫努力的持续推进，消除贫困的目标正逐步变为现实。每一次的成功都为推动构建一个更加公平和繁荣的全球社会带来了宝贵的希望和启示。

Roundtable discussion

Sample answers

Brazil's Family allowance program has been highly successful. It provides financial aid to poor families on the condition that they meet certain requirements, such as sending their children to school and getting regular health check-ups. In local communities, it has had a multi-faceted impact. For example, in the slums of Rio de Janeiro, children's school attendance has significantly increased. Families that once struggled to afford necessities now achieve financial stability. This has led to a reduction in child labor as children are in school instead. It has also improved the overall health of the community since families are more likely to access healthcare services. The program has empowered families to break the cycle of poverty by investing in the education and health of the next generation.

- China's targeted poverty alleviation strategy, as in the case of "Cliff Village," can be shared globally. By accurately identifying poor individuals and families and tailoring specific poverty reduction measures to their unique circumstances, China has achieved remarkable results. For example, in poverty-stricken mountainous areas, infrastructure construction such as building roads and installing power grids has been carried out. This experience can be useful for other countries with similar geographical challenges. It enables a more efficient use of resources as efforts are focused on those most in need. In the global context, especially in developing countries with poor populations in rural areas, this approach can ensure that poverty reduction policies reach the grassroots level effectively.

  China's practice of developing industries with local characteristics in poor areas is also worth sharing. For instance, in some rural areas, the development of rural tourism, such as the establishment of agritainment(农家乐) businesses, has provided new income sources for local villagers. In other areas, the cultivation of special agricultural products like high-quality tea or fruits has been promoted. This experience can inspire other countries to explore and develop industries based on their local resources, which not only increases local employment but also drives economic development in poverty-stricken regions.

- China has also drawn on many successful models from other countries. For example, Yunnan Province, taking into account the realities of its impoverished areas, has advanced the localized development of the Bangladeshi rural credit poverty alleviation model. With major loan funds provided by the Agricultural Development Bank and other fiscal sources, the province directly issues microloans to impoverished farmers through borrower groups and centers.

Communicating with the world

Additional notes

An effective interview about China's poverty alleviation should meet four criteria. First, comprehensive preparation is key. Ss should craft a wide range of open-ended questions, delving deep into aspects like historical background, current policies, and future plans. They should also thoroughly research the topic, gathering real-life stories and data. Second, T should emphasize that a clear structure is essential. The interview should start with an engaging introduction, followed by a well-organized question-answer session, and end with a concise summary. Third, appropriate language use matters. Ss should employ simple, clear, and vivid language, avoiding jargon and complex terms. Fourth, Ss should ensure their words can be understood globally, avoiding culture-specific references that might cause confusion.

For evaluation, consider these aspects:

- Content: Assess the depth and relevance of the information shared, making sure facts and examples support the discussion.
- Structure: Check for a logical flow with smooth connections between different parts of the interview.
- Language: Look for effective use of language to convey ideas clearly and engagingly.
- Communication: Evaluate how well Chinese concepts are translated into accessible language, bridging cultural divides for global audiences.

Sample answers

Interviewer: Good day! We're really excited to be here in this amazing village that has achieved such remarkable poverty alleviation results. First of all, could you briefly introduce yourself and your role in this village's development?

Interviewee: Hi! I'm Li Hua. I'm currently on a summer internship here. During my time here, I've been closely observing and participating in some of the projects related to the village's poverty alleviation and rural revitalization. I've seen firsthand the transformation that has taken place.

Interviewer: Great. So, could you tell us about life in the village before the current poverty alleviation initiatives began? What were the main challenges?

Interviewee: Well, before the poverty alleviation efforts were taken, this village was in a rather unfortunate situation. The land here is not very fertile, and traditional farming methods yielded very little. The infrastructure was poor. Roads to the market were poorly constructed, making the transportation of agricultural products a nightmare. Villagers had to carry their goods on their shoulders for miles to reach the nearest small market. Also, there was a lack of access to quality education and healthcare. Many children dropped out of school early, and the sick often had to travel long distances to get medical treatment.

Interviewer: Sounds really difficult. What were the key strategies that were implemented to turn things around?

Interviewee: One of the primary strategies was infrastructure improvement. The government invested a large amount of money to build wide, sturdy roads. This was crucial as it immediately improved transportation. Now, trucks can come right into the village to buy our agricultural products. Another important strategy was industrial development. We started a cooperative that focused on growing high-value cash crops like special herbs. The rationale behind this was to increase the income of villagers. We received training on how to cultivate these herbs properly, and the cooperative helped with marketing.

Interviewer: Those strategies seem very effective. Can you share some specific success stories?

Interviewee: Absolutely. Take the Wang family for example. Before, Mr. Wang could only grow a small amount of corn and rice on his small plot of land, and the income was barely enough to feed the family. After the road was built and the cooperative was established, he joined the cooperative and started growing special herbs. With the training and support from the cooperative, his harvest was abundant. Last year, his income from selling the herbs was more than five times what he used to earn from traditional farming. The family was able to build a new, spacious house and send their children to better schools in the nearby town.

Interviewer: That's truly inspiring. What ongoing measures are there to ensure long-term prosperity?

Interviewee: Currently, we're focusing on several initiatives. In terms of industrial development, we're exploring rural tourism. The village has a beautiful natural landscape and unique cultural traditions. We've built some small homestays and organized cultural experience activities for tourists. Training programs are also an important part. We're training villagers in service-related skills for the tourism industry, like hospitality and cooking local delicacies. At the same time, we're promoting e-commerce. We're teaching farmers how to sell their products online, which helps them reach a much larger market and get better prices.

Interviewer: China's achievements here are really impressive. Do you think China's experience can be beneficial for other countries facing similar poverty issues? And how?

Interviewee: China's experience has many aspects that can be replicated. The targeted approach, where we identified the problems specific to this village and designed solutions accordingly, can be very useful. The large-scale infrastructure building, which is a fundamental step in connecting rural areas to the market, is also a key lesson. Another important aspect is the integration of different sectors like agriculture, industry, and tourism in the development process. By diversifying the economy, we can create more stable income sources for the villagers. Other countries can adapt these strategies to their local situations and make use of their own resources to drive development.

Interviewer: Thank you so much for sharing all these valuable insights. We've learned about the initial poverty situation in the village, the key poverty alleviation strategies, the real-life success stories, the ongoing rural revitalization measures, and the global significance of China's experience.

Interviewee: You're welcome. I hope that our village's story can serve as a source of hope and inspiration for other communities around the world. With determination and the right strategies, poverty can be overcome, and long-term prosperity can be achieved.
